What is a "Cookie"?

A cookie is a piece of information (small text file) sent to your browser from a website upon its visit and downloaded to your device. - c) they enable us to generally improve your experience of our website; and
- d) they allow our promotional and marketing efforts.

There are other types of tracking technologies used on our website. These include local storage objects tags and web forms.

Cookies contain personal information, for example, your input into online forms or registration pages. Most cookies will not collect information that identifies you directly and will instead collect more general information such as how users arrive at and use our website, or a user's general location.

For more details on cookies and similar technologies, please visit www.allaboutcookies.org.
